

DEFINING MANAGERS, LEADERS, AND MILLENNIALS IN The Millennial Manager Collective

Who's a Manager?

We define a manager as someone responsible for organizing, directing, and controlling workflow, operations, change, and people to meet goals and achieve outcomes. You are considered a manager if you spend your professional time helping your organization or team efficiently and effectively complete work, tasks, and/or projects.

Who's a Leader?

Leaders are people who are responsible (formally or informally) for influencing, motivating, aligning, and inspiring individuals, teams, communities, and organizations to achieve audacious goals. Leaders create the emotional and social conditions that help individuals work together to produce collective results, provide focus, and reach human, community, and organizational potential.

Who's a Millennial?

Millennials are the generation of people born approximately 1981-1996, but we're not collecting birth certificates. If you are an older Gen Zer or a younger Gen Xer who believes in what we're building, you are welcome to join us!
